

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

The damper force in vehicles having a ride level control system is controlled by means of a method, according to which, when the leveling system is activated, a signal is generated and transmitted to a damper force control device (5). When the level control system is activated, the damper force is adapted, and especially reduced for a rapid control.